

I have been a listener of K-LOVE for 5 years now. Very few radio stations in my area are what I would consider safe for children to listen to. Even though there is more than one Christian station, I choose K-LOVE because the reception is so clear; no matter where I drive. We support K-LOVE because we don't want to lose it as a radio station. If we didn't have K-LOVE as a station we wouldn't listen to radio ever. The only way we could, would be to be online and that could be costly for us let alone someone else who doesn't have a personal computer and a service provider. I've had many family members, friends, and acquaintances ask about a suitable radio station for little ears, and I've never had to think about who to direct them to. If K-LOVE were displaced by an LPFM broadcaster providing other programming could the FCC guarantee me a station that I would be as willing to recommend to these people? - Probably not. K-LOVE offers free counseling to listeners 24/7 and also has a prayer team set up to offer hope to all who listen. How many radio stations offer this kind of off-the-air care for their listeners? There have been many research studies showing the power of prayer for people and the positive effects of beliefs/religion on the community. K-Love provides so much more than normal radio stations. They offer family-friendly music & banter by the hosts, counseling to anyone who needs it, prayers for hope and healing. Without these services, what's going to happen to all the people who need them? America is founded on freedom of religion not freedom from religion. By taking away Christian radio you take away my rights.

Sincerely,
